

COFFEE THROUGH PHILATELY

Coffee is a brewed drink prepared from roasted coffee beans, the seeds of berries from certain flowering plants in the Coffee genus. From the coffee fruit, the seeds are separated to produce a stable, raw product: unroasted green coffee. The seeds are then roasted, a process which transforms them into a consumable product: roasted coffee, which is ground into fine particles that are typically steeped in hot water before being filtered out, producing a cup of coffee. It is taken with milk and sugar or black coffee. It also depends on individual taste. Hot or cold is yet another feature. It is believed the reflex of people who drink coffee are more due to caffeine. Just like any product excess of anything is bad so also coffee which has caffeine. Various types like Arabica, Robusta, Latte, Cappuccino, Americano, Espresso and Doppio are some of the varieties.
